MAISON DEKOCK, SINCE 1898

In a daily life punctuated by demands, goals and pressure, well-being becomes an essential priority. In the quest for non-stop performance, every detail counts.

For a top-level athlete, training does not stop at the end of a session: it continues through recovery, rest and the restoration of mind-body balance.

These moments of calm are necessary to improve and continue performing at the highest level. To sustain this, you need to find the right balance between effort and rest, intensity and letting go.

At 'Au Bon Repos', my partner for several years, we believe that well-being is essential to success and personal fulfilment.

Because performing well also means knowing how to rest properly.

On that note, during the tournament in London, we quickly realised just how much the environment directly affects recovery and performance. Between rooms ill-suited to rest, worn-out bedding, disrupted nights and very limited comfort, the conditions were far from ideal for a full recovery between matches.

This experience made a lasting impression on us, as it reminded us of one essential thing: at the very highest level, performance does not depend solely on training or talent.

The quality of sleep, physical comfort and general well-being play an equally important role in the ability to stay focused, recover and perform consistently over the long term.

In the end, our performance—or rather, our underperformance—was finishing 5th in that European Cup, when we'd been aiming for a podium finish or even a gold medal. That tournament proved to be a real turning point in our history, because after it, the coaching staff changed, Shane arrived, and our golden era began.

It just goes to show that if you want to perform well, it's just as much about what happens off the pitch as it is on it.

AU BON REPOS. The Dekock family since 1898

1898

Guillaume and Louise Dekock opened their first shop in Blaes Street. It was called «Au Grand Mouton Blanc». A reference to the wool that would soon be on display and used for carding* mattresses.

* To work textile fibres in order to untangle them with the help of carding machines (natural or industrial), Carding wool, etc.

1963

Unite the two stores.

1971

While many competitors left the city and moved to the suburbs, along the main roads, Roger continued to believe that leaving the Place de la Chapelle would be a mistake. He therefore launched the last expansion project for the shop to arrive at the result we know today.

1957

On 20 September, Lucien Cooremans, Mayor of Brussels, officially opened the first extensions.

1998

AU BON REPOS celebrates its 100th anniversary

1919

Guillaume set up his two sons, Gabriel and François, in two separate businesses. The "Au Bon Repos" name was introduced at No. 12 Place de la Chapelle, which he had bought a few years earlier.

1957

The range of products was extended ... Roger and Christiane began to make wall hangings and, shortly afterwards, furniture.

2019

After 47 years of loyal service, the two Dekock brothers handed the reins over to their sons and nephew. Gregory, Steve and Bertrand are renovating the shop. Inside and out

1940

Europe is once again at war. On 1 September 1940, Gabriel learned that his wonderful Chevrolet truck had been requisitioned. In 1944, the truck requisitioned in 1940 had still not been returned, so Gabriel had a «priority order» to acquire a means of transport.

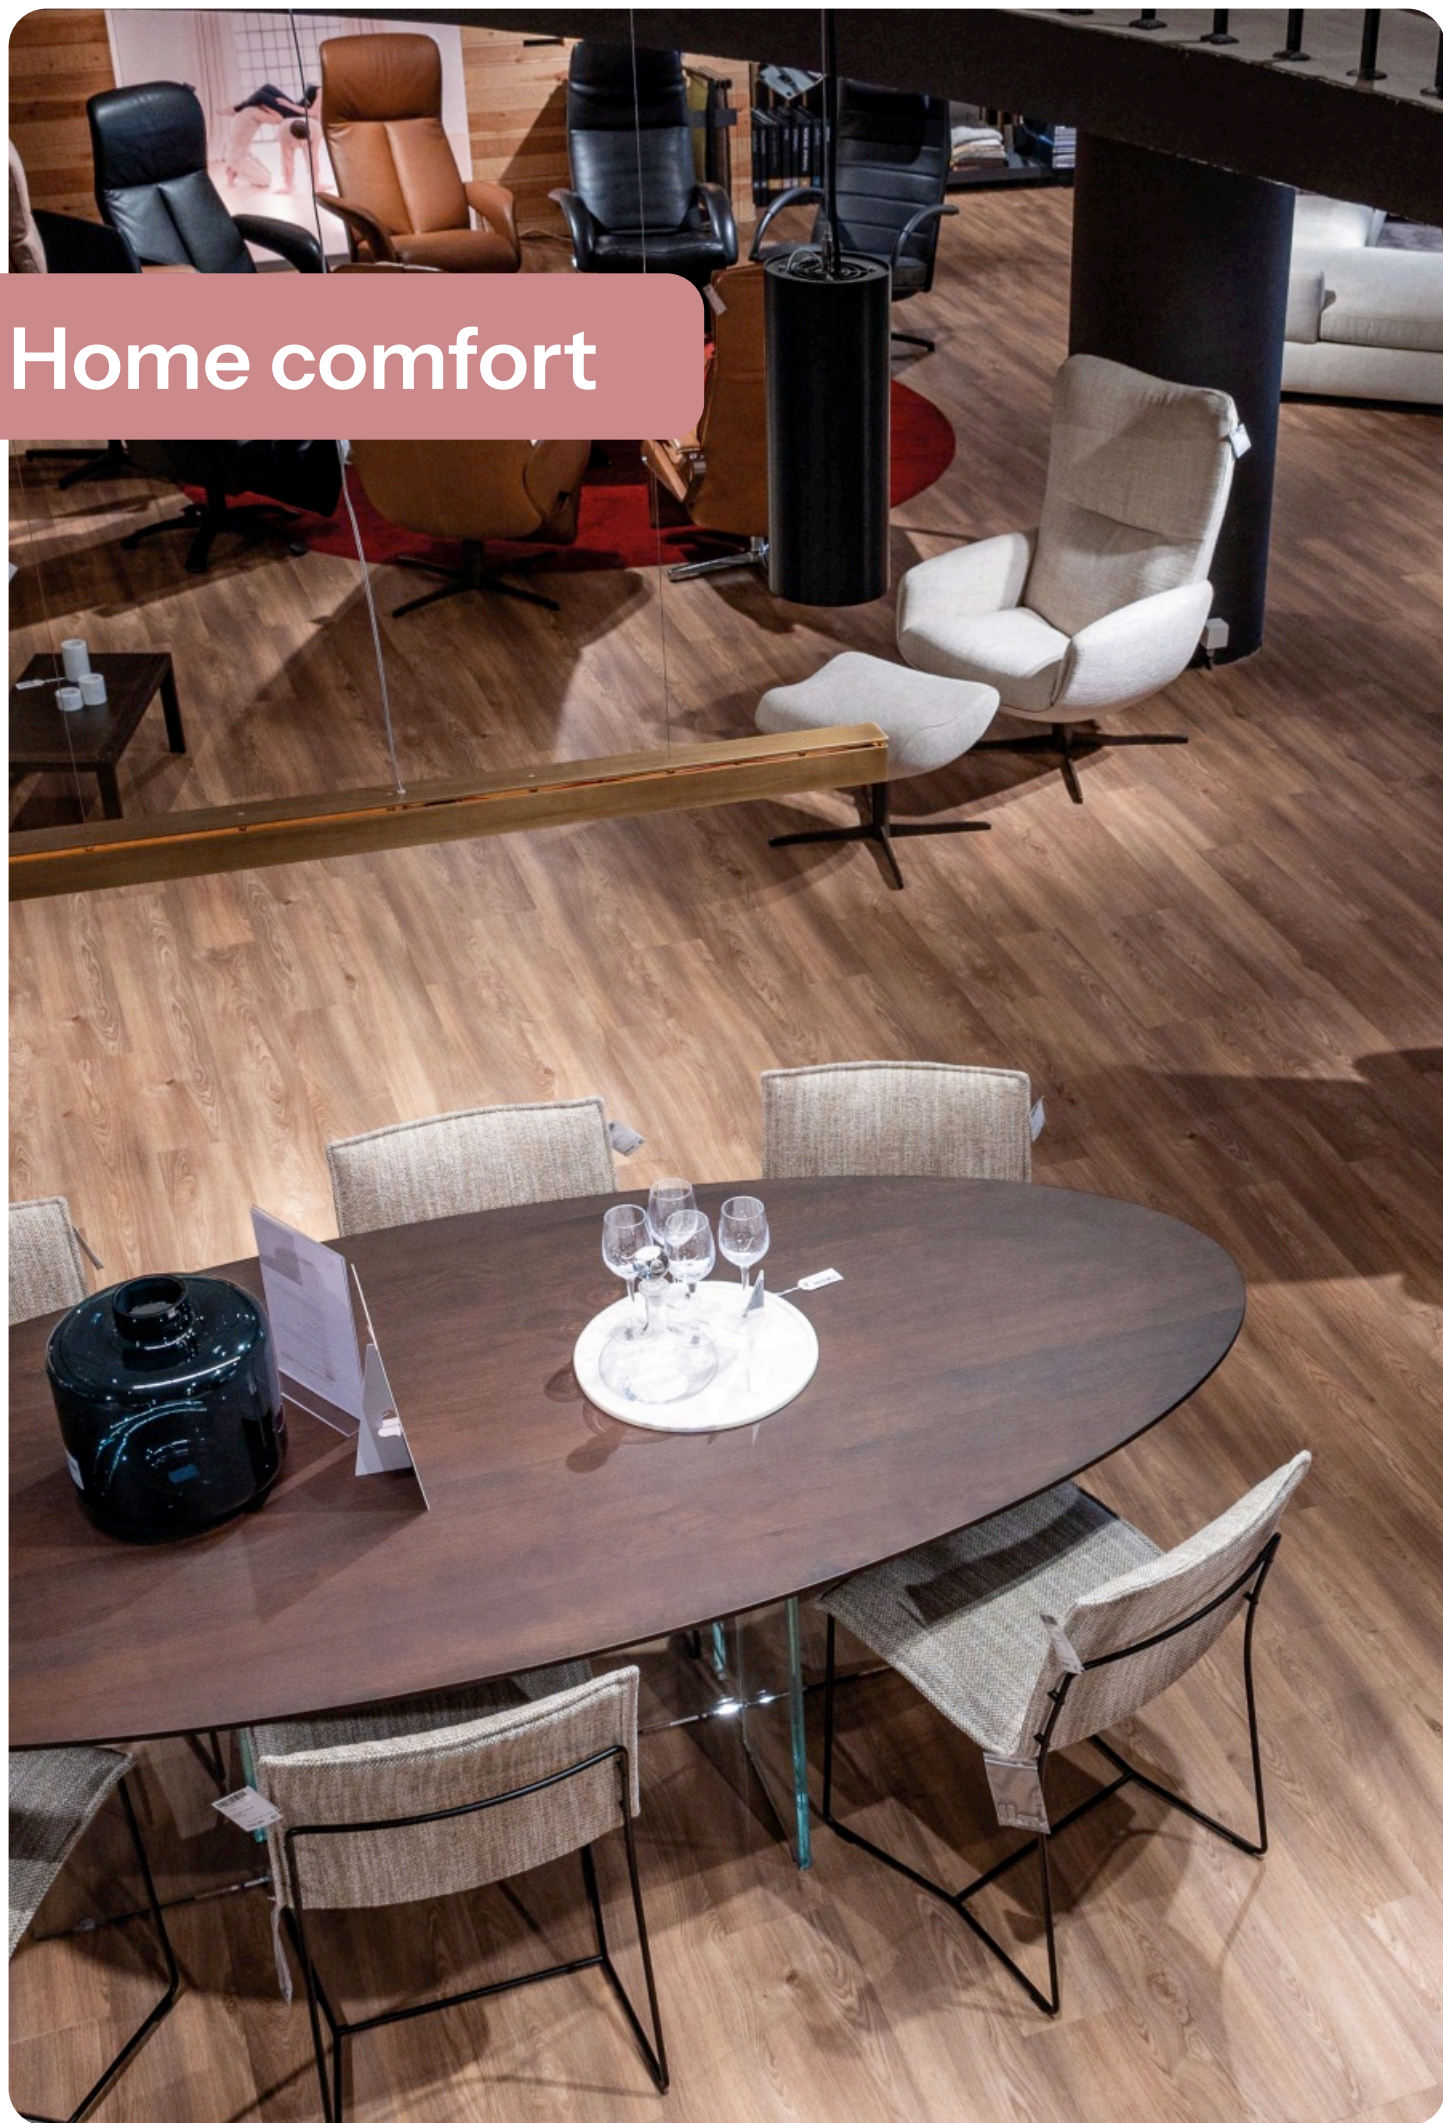

2023

AU BON REPOS: 125 years of longevity.
